

Dear Reader,

With Valentine’s Day quickly approaching, some are making dinner plans, while others may roll their eyes at the holiday’s familiar rituals. But beyond the traditional gestures, there are countless forms of love worth celebrating.

It’s the unwavering support of a close friend during challenging times. The joy of being needed by a child, knowing you’re an important part of their world. The connection with a romantic partner, with whom you share so much more than just a home address. The unconditional love of a pet that greets you after a long day.

As the Friends of Lancaster Public Library, we understand that love takes many forms. We are a dedicated group of Library Lovers, driven by a shared belief that the library is a place where these different kinds of love intersect – a place where all stories are told, and where every visitor can find something that speaks to their heart.

This Valentine’s Day, The Friends invite you to continue spreading the love by making a donation and supporting the Library’s mission to provide a safe and enriching environment for all. Thanks to the generosity of supporters like you, Lancaster Public Library remains a welcoming space for reading, learning, and growth. Your donations are essential in helping to keep our doors open and to ensure our shelves continue to be filled with stories that inspire, educate, and connect us all.

With friendship,

Danielle Cummings
